Farm Bureau unites all of Oregon ag

First established in Oregon in 1919, Farm Bureau is a grassroots, nonprofit, nonpartisan organization that advocates for family farmers and ranchers in the political and public arenas. The guiding principle: agriculture producers have a stronger voice when they speak together.

This means Farm Bureau is a general agriculture organization, uniting not only the people who raise all of Oregon’s 250 agricultural products—but also all farm sizes and all types of farming.

In this issue of Oregon’s Bounty, we feature over 300 family farms and ranches that sell an immense variety of food, foliage, and more directly to consumers via farm stands, u-picks, CSAs, and booths at farmers markets. Oregon State University estimates that almost 6,700 farms, or 19 percent of all Oregon ag operations, sell their products through direct sales to the public.

Peruse these pages to find out where to buy seasonal fruits, veggies, flowers, nuts, meat, and more directly from Oregon farmers—or go to Oregon’s Bounty online at oregonfb.org, do a search, and find directions to a farm.

Also essential to the strength of Oregon agriculture are commercial-scale operations, farms and ranches that sell their products on the commodity market to retailers, distributors, and food processors.

Shelly Boshart Davis, member of Linn County Farm Bureau, featured on p. 2 is a great example of how a commercial-scale farm is also a family farm. Indeed, 98 percent of all farms and ranches in Oregon are family owned and operated. Her farm, like many others, is an incorporated business for tax reasons. What it is not is a “corporate farm” in the negative sense, a term some anti-ag groups use to scare consumers into thinking that farmers don’t care about the quality of their product, their customers, or the environment.

In this issue, you’ll also learn about Farm Bureau programs that unite and celebrate farms and ranches of all sizes. These include Young Farmers & Ranchers, Century Farm & Ranch, and the Summer Ag Institute.

Since 1919, Farm Bureau has proudly represented all of Oregon agriculture and embraces its diversity. Thank you for your membership!
Family farmer finds her niche
HOW SHELLY BOSHART DAVIS FOUND HER PLACE ON THE FARM AND VOICE AS AN ADVOCATE

By Anne Marie Moss

Third-generation farmer. International export expert. Passionate “advocate.” National Farm Mom of the Year. These are all accurate ways to describe Shelly Boshart Davis, member of Linn County Farm Bureau.

“The past couple of years have been amazing,” said Davis, who this year celebrates her 10-year anniversary of returning to the farm in Tangent to work full time.

The farm, established in 1950 by her grandfather Merrill Boshart, raises grass seed, wheat, and three years ago diversified into hazelnuts. It also is an international exporter of Oregon grass straw (via a business called Bossco Trading) with its own truck fleet (Boshart Trucking) and press to prepare product for overseas shipping (PressCo).

“Growing up, I had always been out in the field and on equipment, and so I was absolutely ready and willing to do that when I returned,” she said. “What I learned — and what I tell others, especially family businesses with the next generation coming in — is to find your niche. What are you good at, but also where does the farm need you?”

In Davis’s case, her business acumen was needed most. She had graduated from Oregon State University with a business degree in 2002, then spent a few years working in Arizona and Nevada. But Davis missed rural life and “the green of Oregon.” So in 2006, she came back to Tangent to see where she could best help her dad, Stan Boshart.

In the 1990s, the farm had developed a successful service baling and storing grass straw for Willamette Valley farmers, as well as preparing it for shipping overseas. The straw is what remains in the field after a grass seed crop has been harvested for its seed. Since Oregon law prohibits field burning, a farmer’s options are... to chop the straw back into the soil or bale it.

There’s an international market for Oregon grass straw, particularly in Japan and Korea. With very limited grazing options, cattle ranchers and dairy farmers in these countries use the straw to add fiber to their animals’ diet.

For years, the Bosharts’ job would end after dropping off large shipping containers of straw for a stateside export broker, who was in charge of getting product overseas.

But in 2007, a year after Davis returned to Oregon, the broker suddenly announced it was going out of business.

“We immediately thought, ‘Why not export ourselves?,’ ” said Davis. “And I realized this is where I’m needed. I’m like, ‘Dad, let’s do it,’ and he’s like, ‘Alright, let’s do it.’”

“That next year involved the most learning I’ve ever done,” she said. “We went from just dropping off containers to working with ship lines, international banking, and developing relationships with customers in Japan and Korea.”

Today, Davis is vice president of international sales and marketing, spending more time in the office than in the field or hazelnut orchard. For most of the year, she focuses on working with importers, warehouses, and a few large beef and dairy farms based across the Pacific.

During summer harvest, which includes not only straw but also the family farm’s own grass seed and wheat, Davis works on hiring up to 35 seasonal employees, ensuring workers know where they need to go, and coordinating equipment — combines, windrowers, balers, and trucks — as it moves in and out of the fields.

— combines, windrowers, balers, and trucks — as it moves in and out of the fields.

Becoming an agvocate
Agriculture exporting is not only where Davis found her niche on the farm, but also her voice as a passionate advocate for agriculture, aka “agvocate.”

In November 2014, shipping on the West Coast was disrupted due to a labor standoff between the longshoremen union and the maritime association that runs the ports. Loading and unloading of products on ships slowed down dramatically.

While the average consumer may not have noticed what was happening, Bossco Trading and Boshart Trucking sure did. Forty percent of Oregon ag products are exported internationally. At that time of year, Oregon growers of Christmas trees, potatoes, hay, and straw with customers overseas were immediately impacted.

“At the worst of it, we had trucks sitting at the docks and 155 containers of grass straw stalled between the ports of Portland, Tacoma, and Seattle,” said Davis. “We couldn’t invoice our customers because the product wasn’t on the ships and we didn’t know when it would be.”
Frustrated at the lack of media and lawmaker attention, Davis started a blog — daughterofatrucker.com — to communicate what was going on and how it was impacting Oregon farmers. She shared the blog with everyone she knew, made calls, and quickly became a go-to farmer contact for the media. Farm Bureau was also working on the issue; OFB, along with other Oregon ag and business groups, contacted national lawmakers about the situation, beseeching the federal government to intervene to get the standoff resolved quickly.

“Finally the issue got enough momentum, enough people, enough press, that President Obama sent his labor secretary out here,” said Davis. In February 2015, a deal was struck between the union and the ports, and it was ratified a couple months later.

“But we’re still feeling the effects of it,” said Davis. “Because we couldn’t ship our grass straw, we ended up with carryover of about 20 percent of last year’s harvest. We were oversupplied and prices got really bad. We’re still trying to crawl out of that.”

The port issue was just the start of Davis’s agvocacy. In both the 2015 and 2016 Oregon Legislative Sessions, she made numerous trips to the capitol to explain to lawmakers the impacts proposed bills would have on her farm. There were many bills that concerned Oregon’s agriculture community: the minimum wage increase, mandatory paid sick leave, low carbon fuel standard, bans on certain types of farming, limits on crop protection tools, among others.

Davis thanks Farm Bureau for organizing farmers and ranchers at the capitol, providing details on legislation, and representing Oregon agriculture when members have to tend to their crops and animals.

“Farm Bureau is very necessary. Unfortunately, there are people who are anti-business, anti-farming, anti-rural. Agriculture is constantly fighting battles from all sides,” said Davis. “But that’s what got me involved.”

“I’ll be your farmer!”

Davis believes it’s essential for farmers and ranchers to build relationships with their legislators and within their communities. There’s a lot of interest in where food comes from — and a lot of misinformation.

“I tell people to get to know a farmer. If you have questions about agriculture, you’ll know who to talk to instead of just believing what you see online,” she said. “I’m always like,
‘I’ll be your farmer! Or I can find you a farmer.’”

For example, Davis often has to explain how a “corporate farm” isn’t a bad thing.

“Ninety-eight percent of Oregon farms and ranches are family owned and operated,” she said. “We’re a family farm but also a ‘corporate’ farm for tax and liability reasons.”

Or that conventional farms “douse” their crops with pesticides and don’t care about the health of the land.

“People who apply pesticides must have a state-issued pesticide applicator’s license and hours of continuing education,” she said. “There’s no reason not to follow the rules. If we spray too much, we’re wasting money and not helping our crops.”

And don’t get her started on “gluten-free milk.” (Gluten is only present in cereal grains, particularly wheat.)

“I’m like, come on! That’s not an untrue statement, not a lie, but it’s misleading,” she said. “But I try to talk about agriculture with an air of education instead of frustration. This is what farmers do and this is why.”

So why haven’t farms and ranches been more transparent in the past?

“You know, we were never not transparent. We’ve been farming out in the open for generations. We just didn’t realize the public wanted to know,” she said. “That’s why so many farmers have started blogging and taking pictures. When someone asks to visit our farm, we bend over backwards to say absolutely.”

In the world of Oregon agriculture advocacy, there are a handful of women you can count on to be first in line to testify at the state capitol, live-tweet a committee hearing, write impactful blog posts, and post photos of their farms on Facebook. This group of women, and a few others not pictured, are extraordinary in their passion for speaking up and out on behalf of fellow farmers and ranchers. From left are Farm Bureau members Brenda Kirsch Frcketich, Shelly Boshart Davis, Amy Doerfler Phelan, Molly Pearmine McCargar, Kathy Freeborn Hadley, Macey Wessels, and Oregon Women for Ag’s Marie Bowers Stagg. Indeed, Davis is always proud to share her story as a farmer and does so frequently with visits to classrooms, conversations with people in her community, speaking engagements, media interviews, and legislative advocacy. “I love what I do,” Davis said. “For me it’s a lifestyle. Being able to work with my family and be part of this land and be part of this legacy... I can’t think of doing anything else.”

About a year ago, Shelly Boshart Davis of Linn County Farm Bureau was named National Farm Mom of the Year.

“I couldn’t believe it,” she said.

The program, sponsored by Monsanto, recognizes an outstanding farm mom, “who works tirelessly to support her family, farm, community, and the future of agriculture.”

Davis was nominated by someone from the Linn County United Way, where she volunteers. Her love for her kids, long workdays at the farm, advocacy on the port labor crisis, and community involvement were mentioned in her nomination.

“The fact that someone outside of agriculture nominated me means that people were listening or being inspired or recognized the value of agriculture. That spoke volumes,” she said.

Of more than 1,400 nominated women, Davis was chosen as one of five regional winners. She earned the national title after winning the most votes in a public online competition.

As National Farm Mom — and the first winner ever from the Pacific Northwest — Davis was awarded $10,000, spoke at events across the country, and gave numerous media interviews.

“It was so neat. It gave me a national platform to talk about the good parts of Oregon agriculture, like how we raise over 250 different crops and animals here, and also some of our challenges,” she said. “I’m proud to be an American farmer. I’m so fortunate to do what I love.”

As for everyday life as a successful farm mom, Davis credits her husband Geoff and their daughters Kyndall, 13, Ashlynn, 10, and Samantha, 8.

“If I didn’t have a fantastic husband, I wouldn’t be able to do half of what I do,” she said.

Oregon Farm Bureau: 15 facts

Whether you’re a Farm Bureau member through COUNTRY Financial — or a farmer or rancher wanting to protect and strengthen Oregon agriculture — OFB greatly appreciates your membership.

Following are 15 Farm Bureau facts you may not realize.

1. Farm Bureau is a true democratic, grassroots organization. OFB’s public policy positions are presented, discussed, and voted upon by family farmers and ranchers from all parts of the state.

2. Farm Bureau was first established in Oregon in 1919 in Umatilla County.

3. The first official Farm Bureau mission in 1919: Educate farmers in the region who were using inefficient wheat-growing practices about the latest technology in wheat cultivation.

4. Oregon Farm Bureau was established as a statewide organization in 1932. The first OFB president was Mac Hoke.

5. The largest general ag organization in Oregon, Farm Bureau now has 7,000 members professionally engaged in agriculture.

6. Farmer and rancher volunteer leaders comprise OFB’s Board of Directors and issue advisory committees. They also represent the diversity of Oregon agriculture.

7. OFB believes there is room for, and a need for, all farm sizes and all types of farming: organic, conventional, biotech, and no-tech. Farmers are the best people to decide how to farm and what to raise on their own operations.

8. Farm Bureau is essential because agriculture needs a strong, unified voice at the local, state, and federal legislature — otherwise farmers and ranchers would be regulated out of business by people who don’t understand or value agriculture.

9. Farming is impacted by almost every type of public policy, including laws involving land use, water, labor, taxes, wildlife, transportation, and the environment.

10. With OFB’s many discount programs, it’s easy to recoup the cost of annual membership dues. See p. 20.

11. OFB programs include Young Farmers & Ranchers (YF&R) (p. 12), Century Farm & Ranch (p. 14), Summer Ag Institute for teachers (p. 15), and the Farm Employer Education & Legal Defense Service (FEELDS).

12. Every year at the state and county level, Farm Bureau gives about $65,000 worth of scholarships to students across Oregon.

13. Every year, OFB’s Women’s Advisory Council donates about $4,500 to Oregon’s three Ronald McDonald House Charities.

14. Voting and supporting (farmer) members can get involved at the county Farm Bureau level. Visit oregonfb.org for your county contact or call OFB at 503.399.1701.

15. COUNTRY Financial purchased the Northwest Farm Bureau Insurance Company in 1986, which began the partnership between COUNTRY and OFB.

Meet three Farm Bureau volunteer leaders

Jason Flowers
YF&R Chair, outgoing AFBF YF&R rep

What do you raise?
I’m a fourth generation farmer from Klamath County raising grass hay, alfalfa, oats, barley, wheat, and cattle.

How was serving on the national Young Farmers & Ranchers (YF&R) Committee?
I recently completed two years on the American Farm Bureau YF&R Committee. It was a great experience. We worked with YF&R programs all across the country. A highlight for me was attending Washington state Farm Bureau’s annual meeting and putting on a workshop for those YF&R members.

What’s your role in Oregon’s YF&R now?
I’m serving as chair of the YF&R Committee here in Oregon.

My goal as state chair is to reach out more to YF&R’s at the county Farm Bureau level. This spring we offered an ag tour for Farm Bureau members of the north Willamette Valley, Gorge, and Central Oregon. We also were really involved with the Oregon FFA Convention in Corvallis in March.

YF&R is a perfect transition for high school students after FFA. They can continue with leadership development, competitive events, travel opportunities, and social activities with other young farmers and ranchers.

Jeana Hall
Malheur County Farm Bureau President

What do you raise?
We have a commercial beef cow/calf operation, mostly Black Angus and Hereford mix. We grow alfalfa hay and triticale. We are a first-generation ranch with the second generation halfway grown. My husband and I also have jobs off the ranch to make it work.

What are challenges facing Eastern Oregon ag producers?
Drought and water use issues, definitely. Malheur County Farm Bureau is also very concerned about a potential national monument designation on the Owyhee Canyonlands. This would impact millions of acres of land that have been worked by cattle ranchers for generations, and it would hurt the local rural community.

What might folks on the west side not realize about Eastern Oregon farmers and ranchers?
That we know how to take care of our land, animals, crops, and water. That we don’t need people out of the area telling us what works best for our local communities. We live here. We love this land and our country!

Why is Farm Bureau important?
It’s important because as a grassroots organization, Farm Bureau helps the voices of farmers and ranchers be heard in the political arena, when they otherwise would not be heard. We work to educate lawmakers and the public about issues facing Oregon agriculture and rural communities.

Why do you love ranching?
Ranching is hard work. There are days when you just want to walk away but you don’t. Why? Because we love to work in the dirt, we love to work with the cattle and horses. It’s honest work and we love it.

We love that our boys are being raised on hard work, good ethics, and practical know how. Our youth are our most important asset. Without them, who will be left to raise food for future generations?

Jerry Mann
Yamhill County Farm Bureau President

What do you raise?
I raise chickens for Foster Farms and Angus cattle, alfalfa, and orchard grass.

What makes Farm Bureau credible?
The grassroots structure of Farm Bureau keeps it closely connected to farmers and ranchers, the people who are actually raising crops and animals in Oregon.

What are some challenges facing your farm?
For farms around the Portland Metro area, expansion of urban development into and around high-value farmland is a continuous struggle. In fact, there’s a highway being built right next to my farm. I don’t see urban encroachment slowing down; it’s only going to get worse.

How does keeping agriculture strong benefit all Oregonians?
It’s important for our economy. Oregon agriculture is directly and indirectly linked to about $50 billion in sales of goods and services, and almost 14 percent of total jobs in the state.

And just the diversity we have here in terms of the wide variety of crops and livestock we can raise on a commercial level. There aren’t many states that can do that.

What do you like about farming?
Not being in an office all day. I like the independence — the challenge of being able to accomplish something individually and call my own shots, win or lose.

Are you or someone you know in FFA? Do you love learning about agriculture, getting the chance to travel and compete, and meeting others who share the same interests?

If so, Young Farmers & Ranchers (YF&R) is the place for you.

YF&R is a group within Farm Bureau specifically for agriculture producers between the ages of 16 and 35. YF&R gives members the tools to become effective “agvocates” for agriculture, and many opportunities for travel, leadership development, networking, and fun.

“YF&R is the perfect transition once students finish their FFA career,” said YF&R Chair Jason Flowers. “For most, that kind of activity goes away after high school. Through YF&R, you can continue with leadership development, participate in statewide competitions, travel, and network, all while learning how to make a true difference for Oregon agriculture.”

YF&R has strong ties with FFA. At the 2016 Oregon FFA Convention Corvallis in March, YF&R members hosted a booth, served as judges for various contests, met with state officer candidates, and helped sponsor the state FFA Degree recipient reception.

To introduce students to the political advocacy side of Farm Bureau, in January YF&R offered a special legislative day for FFA at the start of the 2016 Legislative Session.

Students got to tour the Oregon Capitol, learn about public policy impacting Oregon agriculture, and understand how Farm Bureau members work within the legislative process.

“This group was comprised of top-notch FFA leaders — kids that will potentially have an office in this building someday,” said YF&R’s Kathy Hadley. “YF&R was glad to educate them about the agriculture issues we face every day as farmers and ranchers, and the dual role Farm Bureau members play in advocating for our industry at the capitol.”

At the start of the 2016 Legislative Session, YF&R organized a day at the capitol for FFA students.
Bryson Price of the Sutherlin FFA Chapter attended “to gain experience in working with other ag organizations, networking, and learning how progress can be made when farmers of all ages work together.”

Within the past year, YF&R also organized ag tours for Farm Bureau members featuring agriculture in the North Willamette Valley, Gorge, Central Oregon, and Southeastern Oregon; participated in Oregon State University’s Ag Days; held a collegiate discussion meet at OSU; and had nine members attend the national YF&R leadership conference in Nashville.

There were numerous other social, networking, educational, and service-oriented events offered to YF&R members throughout the year at the local, state, and national levels.

“I’ve gained so much from YF&R. I just wish I had gotten involved at a younger age,” said Flowers.

Last year, members of YF&R traveled to Washington DC and met with Oregon’s national legislators, including Congressman Greg Walden.

YF&R’s Catherine Kiyokawa and Logan Padget participated in the 2015 YF&R Discussion Meet at the OFB Annual Meeting in Sunriver.

Fast Facts about YF&R

- What it is: A program designed for Farm Bureau members aged 16 and 35
- Why it’s cool: YF&R is the perfect transition from FFA. It offers the training and competitions of FFA, and helps you put skills to real-world use on your farm or ranch, and in political and public arenas.
- Other perks: Travel opportunities around Oregon and nationally. Recent YF&R events brought members to Washington DC, Kansas City, Nashville, and Orlando. Did we mention fun? Social events have included ski trips, BBQs, and farm tours.
- YF&R events: Three statewide competitions — the Discussion Meet, the Achievement Award, and Excellence in Ag — with winners getting the chance to compete at the national Farm Bureau convention. Workshops have included communication effectiveness, legislative advocacy, farm management, and transitioning a farm from one generation to the next. YF&R also hosts the state FFA Tractor Driving Contest, organizes regional farm tours, and does outreach work with FFA.
- Where to learn more: Visit oregonfb.org or contact Dennis Myhrum at dennis@oregonfb.org. YF&R is also on Facebook!
The Century Farm & Ranch program, administered by the Oregon Farm Bureau Foundation for Education, is one of the oldest agricultural heritage recognition programs in the nation. It honors farms and ranches that have remained within the same family and operational for at least 100 years.

A Sesquicentennial status is available for those that have reached the 150-year mark.

Taghon Farm in Washington County is one of the newest additions to the official list of 1,175 Century Farms in Oregon.

“In 1915, my great grandfather Theophile Cappoen made the journey from Minnesota and established the family farm with a purchase of 10 acres,” said Marie Finegan of Washington County Farm Bureau.

By 1919, the farm had grown by 30 more acres. That same year, one of Theophile’s daughters, Pauline, married a man named Rene Taghon. The Taghons eventually took over the family farm, but the transition wasn’t easy.

“Rene was a butler by trade, so operating a farm was quite an undertaking,” according to the family’s Century Farm application. To prime the area for raising more crops and animals, many acres of timberland had to be cleared by hand and horse throughout the 1920s.

Pauline and Rene’s son, Henry Taghon, was the next generation to run the business. He and his wife Irma purchased it in 1945 and raised seed crops, peas, pumpkins, wheat, barley, and oats. They also had a herd of dairy cows. The farm’s milk was transported to McMinnville and sold to a dairy cooperative that became what’s known today as Darigold.

Joseph Finegan, Henry’s grandson and the great-great grandson of Theophile Cappoen, purchased the farm in 2005 and is the current owner. Today the farm raises grass seed, wheat, clover, sweet corn, green beans, and nursery products.

At the Century Farm induction ceremony last summer, three generations of the family were represented. The 2016 class will be honored during a special ceremony at the Oregon State Fair.

Summer Ag Institute connects teachers & farmers

Tell the teachers in your life to register for the 2016 Summer Ag Institute! It’s an award-winning program that introduces educators to Oregon agriculture through an interesting, action-packed experience where participants come away with new perspectives and lesson plans.

A project of the Oregon Farm Bureau Foundation for Education, SAI is a three-credit, week-long, graduate-level class through Oregon State University that educates K-12 teachers with little or no background in farming or agriculture.

The goal of SAI is to help educators use agriculture as a context for teaching standard subjects like science, math, social studies, and English. Current, factual, and scientific information about agriculture is presented, and participants are provided with educational materials to help them incorporate what they’ve learned into their classrooms. Since its first summer in 1989, SAI has enrolled 819 Oregon teachers with the goal of helping to promote the importance of agriculture to society.

Through SAI, teachers are given first-hand experiences in agriculture. The week includes field trips to farms and ranches, tours of processing plants, and lectures and hands-on labs taught by university professors. A highlight is an overnight stay on a working farm where the teacher has an opportunity to spend time with a farm family.

“We wish every Oregon educator could attend Summer Ag Institute,” said Janice Reed, coordinator of SAI in Union/La Grande. “Besides learning an incredible amount about Oregon agriculture and getting useful lesson plan ideas, it’s a great deal at $600 for three graduate-level credits through Oregon State University.”

There are two sessions of SAI each summer: one held in Corvallis, June 19-24, and a second held in Union/La Grande, July 10-15. Enrollment cost for a graduate-level, three-credit session is a great deal at $600.

To learn more about SAI, visit oregonfb.org, or contact Debbie Crocker about SAI Corvallis at 541.740.5073, dcrocker@99webstreet.com, or Janice Reed about SAI La Union/La Grande at janice@oregonfb.org.
Enjoy Oregon’s Bounty

In the following pages – and Oregon’s Bounty online at oregonfb.org – you’ll find over 300 family farms and ranches that sell an enormous array of Oregon-grown agriculture products directly to the public.

U-pick berries, seasonal vegetables, flowering baskets, locally raised meat, and on-farm events are just a few of the offerings waiting for you from Farm Bureau members all across the state.

The listings in this magazine are organized by region, then by opening date and alphabetically.

Farm favorites — u-pick fields, Community Supported Agriculture (CSAs), pumpkins, Christmas trees, wine, and festivals and activities — are indicated by colored boxes throughout (see key on next page).

And at oregonfb.org, you can take Oregon’s Bounty on the go. Search for farm stands by region and keyword, and quickly find directions via your smartphone.

As you head out into the country, we urge you to talk to the farmers and ranchers you encounter.

Curious about chemical use, animal care, or environmental stewardship? Ask them about it. They’ll be happy to share their story and explain how they farm and why they do it.

You’ll find that Oregon farmers and ranchers are people who care deeply about the quality and safety of their products, and the health of the land, water, air, and animals. They’re people who take immense pride in their livelihood and lifestyle.

Farm Bureau is honored to work with and for Oregon’s farming and ranching community. We hope you enjoy not only the diversity of farm-fresh products, but also the extraordinary people who are Oregon agriculture.

Better Hearing is Better Living!
Easily recoup your annual Farm Bureau dues with these great discounts

How to get the discounts: The OFB discount codes, phone numbers, and instructions were sent with your Farm Bureau membership card. Or send a request for a benefit instruction sheet along with your membership number (or the name the membership is under) to annemarie@oregonfb.org.

Note: Your Farm Bureau membership number is the nine-digit number starting with “3” on the address label of this magazine.

Members can save up to $2,000 on new Cat machines, including wheel loaders, skid steers, backhoes, excavators, and more. Members must provide a valid Member Verification Certificate to the dealer at the time of purchase or lease quote to receive the discount. Create the certificate with your Farm Bureau number at fbadvantage.com/cat.

Thanks to a new agreement with Grainger, Farm Bureau members can save up to 30% off products purchased through Grainger, as well as receive free standard ground shipping on ALL orders, including orders placed in-store, by phone, or online.

COUNTRY Financial offers insurance for auto, farm, home, life, crop, identity theft coverage, and more. COUNTRY’s insurance and other services are available exclusively to Farm Bureau members. Call 888.211.2555 or visit countryfinancial.com.

Eligible Farm Bureau members can receive $500 Bonus Cash on the 2015 or 2016 Chevrolet, GMC, or Buick vehicle they purchase or lease. This offer is stackable with other discount programs. Print a discount certificate with your Farm Bureau number at fbadvantage.com.

While on a trip in the United States or abroad, Farm Bureau members can save 20% at 5,000 Choice Hotels, including Sleep, Comfort, Clarion, Cambria, Suburban, EconoLodge, Mainstay, Quality, and Rodeway hotels.

The Wyndham Hotels program offers a 20% discount off the best available rate at 6,400 hotels worldwide, including AmeriHost Inn, Baymont, Days Inn, Hawthorn, Howard Johnson, Knights Inn, Microtel, Ramada, Super 8, Travelodge, Wingate, and Wyndham hotels.

AVIS Farm Bureau members receive up to 20% off of AVIS car rentals.
Eligible Farm Bureau members can receive a $300-per-unit discount on all Polaris Utility and Sport Vehicles, $200 per unit on all All-Terrain Vehicles, and $300 per unit on all GEM Electric Vehicles. Print a discount certificate with your Farm Bureau number and zip code before purchase at fbadvantage.com. Certificates expire after 60 days.

Farm Bureau members can receive a Case-IH discount of $300 to $500 depending on the tractor or implement acquired. Print a discount certificate at fbadvantage.com.

AmeriGas gives Farm Bureau members a 5-cents-per-gallon discount on propane. Customers are eligible for an automatic delivery option, 24/7 emergency service, and a variety of payment programs.

Geared toward those without existing prescription coverage, the OFB Prescription Discount Program gives an average savings of 30% (and up to 75%) on brand and generic prescription drugs at 551 pharmacies in Oregon. There is no red tape and everyone is eligible.

BizPlan (for small business owners) and AgriPlan (for farmers) allow businesses to deduct 100% of their family health insurance premiums and out-of-pocket medical, vision, and dental expenses not covered by insurance.

Farm Bureau Bank offers all manner of excellent banking services for Farm Bureau members, including a credit card that earns points for use, which can be converted into money and put back into the account. Visit farmbureaubank.com, 800.492.3276.

Life Line Screening allows Farm Bureau members to take advantage of mobile health screenings in their own community at a reduced price.

ClearValue Hearing saves members up to 60% off MSRP on all Starkey Hearing Instruments, and significant savings on other hearing needs, including ear protection and ear molds from Westone EarMold Laboratories.

OFB’s Farm Employer Education & Legal Defense Service (FEELDS) offers labor consulting, manuals, compliance training, on-farm check-ups, an employer newsletter, and legal defense for a flat annual fee. Contact Roberta Gruber at 503.399.1701, roberta@oregonfb.org.

Eastern Oregon:
- U-pick fields
- CSAs
- Pumpkins
- Christmas trees
- Wine
- On-farm festivals & activities
For the 2017 Oregon’s Bounty calendar, Farm Bureau invites the public to submit their own photos of Oregon agriculture for possible inclusion. Photos ideas include planting or harvesting of crops, close-ups of agricultural products, panoramic farmland scenes, farm families at work or with animals, portraits of farmers/ranchers, farmers markets, county fairs, almost anything depicting Oregon agriculture.

- Photos must involve farming or ranching in Oregon.
- Photos must be taken in a horizontal format to fit a calendar layout.
- Lower-resolution images can be submitted for judging, however:
  - Selected images MUST be available in high-resolution, 300 dpi format, otherwise they will be too grainy to enlarge.
- Digital images must be submitted in .jpg format.
- Photos with people may require a signed photo release. Please don’t send photos of people you don’t know.
- There is no limit to the number of photos that can be submitted.
- You don’t have to be a Farm Bureau member to participate.

See an example of the Oregon’s Bounty calendar at oregonfb.org/calendar.

How: Email your digital photo(s) to annemarie@oregonfb.org, send them via our dropbox at hightail.com/u/OregonFarmBureau, or mail a CD or prints to Anne Marie Moss, Oregon Farm Bureau, 1320 Capitol St. NE, Suite 200, Salem, OR 97301.

Include with your submission:

- Your name, address, phone number, and email address
- When and where the photo was taken
- Indicate if you are a Farm Bureau member or not
- Your age if you are younger than 18

The selected image or images for month pages will appear with a photo credit in the 2017 Oregon’s Bounty calendar, which is sent to 61,000 Farm Bureau members around the state.

Deadline: September 15, 2016

Rules: By submitting a photograph in a contest, you agree to be bound by all terms and conditions set forth by Oregon Farm Bureau, including the grant of rights set forth below; if you do not agree with these terms and conditions, do not submit an entry. By submitting a photograph in the contest, you acknowledge and agree that OFB shall have the right (without limitation or further compensation to you) to edit, adapt, modify, reproduce, publish, promote, display, and otherwise use your entry in any way it sees fit, including the right to publish your entry online and in print with or without attribution. By submitting entries, you are declaring that you hold the copyright to the images entered or that you have secured the right to distribute the images without restriction. Entries judged inappropriate by OFB for any reason will not be eligible for prizes.
With roots in Umatilla County dating back to 1919, Oregon Farm Bureau was established as a statewide organization in 1932. With 7,000 member families professionally engaged in farming and/or ranching, Farm Bureau is the state’s largest general agriculture organization.

Virtually every aspect of public policy touches family agriculture in some way. Farm Bureau uses a time-tested, open, democratic grassroots process to reach its public policy positions. Members in all 36 Oregon counties work to implement these objectives in the legislative arena. The ultimate aim is the survival and success of Oregon’s agriculture community.

Thank you for supporting Oregon’s family farms and ranches with your Farm Bureau membership.
